I am aware outdoor activities has, in addition to the usual dangers and risks inherent in the activity itself (get lost, loss of control, collisions with other person, trees, rocks and other man-made or natural obstacles, failure of equipment, etc.), certain additional dangers and risks, including but not limited to:

1. Rock, Ice and/or Snow Fall – which may frequently occur in the mountain terrain used for hiking, trekking, climbing and other outdoor activities and may be caused: (a) by natural forces, including slope angle, snow conditions, snowpack and/or rocks stability, solar radiation and/or changing weather conditions, or (b) by persons, transport such as the helicopter, domestic animals such as horses or wild such as goats on their regulated or unregulated displacement or by the failure of "The Operator" to predict whether the terrain is safe for outdoor activities, or when a rock fall and/or snow avalanche may or may not occur. The danger of rock, ice and/or snowfall includes the risk of failure of the rescue and safety gear and/or equipment, technical failures and any negligence in the training or use thereof.
2. Mountain Terrain - mountainous areas with all sort of steep slopes in their natural state that may have many obstacles and hazards (such as loose rock, cliffs, crevasses, variable snow and ice surface, wild animals, etc.), may not have been traveled previously, are not regularly controlled or examined, may require skills, where clients may be lost or separated from their guide or other clients and where communication is difficult and rescue and medical treatment may not be available.

3. Land / Air / Water Transportation – The driving / piloting, including negligence of the transport company. This includes operational error and/or mechanical failure, as well as the additional risks; that are linked to travel on highways, rural roads, gravel routes, mountain trails, paths and the like in various states of preservation in varying weather conditions; air travel in mountainous areas with variable summer and winter weather conditions and navigation in remote areas with varying conditions.
4. Weather and Altitude – climate and/or weather conditions may be extreme and can change rapidly without warning, creating among other risk of hypothermia, frostbite, heat stroke and/or dehydration. I accept all risk and inherent danger of outdoor activities and the possibility of injury, death, damage to gear and equipment and direct or associated losses resulting from this.

I acknowledge that the enjoyment and excitement of outdoor activities is derived in part from exposure to unknown, unvisited or steep terrain and that the inherent risks of outdoor activities contribute to such enjoyment and excitement. I further acknowledge and agree that while practicing outdoor activities I shall at all times FOLLOW THE GUIDE'S INSTRUCTIONS. In entering into this Agreement I am not relying on any oral or written representations or statements made by any of the Operators, including those in the Operators' website, brochures or other marketing, with respect to the safety of the activity, other than what is set forth in this Release Agreement.
